ABILITY to BENEFIT CERTIFICATION FORM

One of the requirements for eligibility for federal financial aid is that all applicants must show the ability to benefit from a college education. Students who have earned a high school diploma, a GED, or a State Certificate of Proficiency are automatically determined to have the ability to benefit.

A student can also show "ability to benefit" from college level classes, and therefore financial aid, by 1) earning a passing grade on an ability to benefit test or 2) by satisfactorily completing six credit hours of coursework with grades of C or better, applicable toward a degree or certificate at Chabot College (excluding PE, remedial or PSCN coursework).

Once you have successfully met one of these requirements, we can resume processing your federal financial aid application.
